HOPE4HOMES Legislation

BPA members across the country have been impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic that has brought home performance contracting to a stand-still. While Congress has passed stimulus funding to ease the burden on small businesses, we are calling on Congress to help provide learning resources to contractors while they are at home AND support homeowners and contractors around the country with a residential retrofit program when contractors allowed to provide their services again.

Congress is already compiling proposals for the next stimulus legislation and HOPE4HOMES should be in the mix!

Please join us in signing this letter to congressional leaders reminding them that investing in America's residential workforce and buildings protects and creates jobs while saving money on utility bills and providing for a sustainable energy future. We will ensure it gets in the hands of your legislators and their staff.

Please help us share your voice with members of Congress.

Message from President
During these interesting times please know that MIACCA has been continuing to advocate for your HVACR businesses and will continue to do so. Given that you may be eligible to, and should self-declare, your HVACR business as an essential business. However it is also important to maintain essential preventative practices at your business and on job sites as indicated in a recent article in the NEWS titled "Comprehensive Guide: HVAC Service Calls During COVID-19".

I would encourage everyone not focus so much on the negative but instead choose to make the best of these times, like taking this opportunity to better train your workforce, to have the technicians clean and organize their tools and trucks, clean and organize your shops and offices, develop or improve processes within your business and take other action to make your business more profitable once this pause ends and this great country gets back to work.

As always stay safe and keep up the great work!

Product Spotlight Building Connect+

Today's facility managers have greater control options for building management than ever before. One such option: Building Connect+, a new cloud-based controls software package from Mitsubishi Electric.

The simple, secure platform was designed to serve light commercial and multifamily applications. The software integrates management of up to 50 Mitsubishi Electric CITY MULTI® Variable Refrigerant Flow systems, up to five third-party BACnet® devices and up to eight hardwired devices into one convenient interface.

In Application

With its web-based portal, Building Connect+ can reduce commissioning time, initial installation and pairing costs. The platform requires minimal programming and doesn't need additional software or licenses to control multiple units and devices. This makes it a great fit for light commercial and multifamily applications.

Once installed, Building Connect+ uses an on-site panel to connect a central controller and third-party equipment to the internet. The panel then auto-discovers the units and devices and connects them using digital inputs and outputs. All configuration is done through a simple web portal.

Account managers can add and manage independent users, giving specific access to certain parties.
